RICHARD DANIEL

I'm Richard, a front end web developer and designer looking for new opportunities to build cool stuff for smart people. I spend my time learning how to make things work and exploring a variety of creative outlets. When I'm not at my desk, I'm a skateboarder, hiker, and an overall adventure enthusiast.

EXPERIENCE

The Iron Yard — Atlanta, GA

Front End Engineering Student: Fall 2014

The Iron Yard is a three-month code school focusing on development of web applications using JavaScript. I built and deployed a variety of applications such as blogging platforms, interactive games and social websites. Our projects involved everything from the fundamentals of structure and styling (using tools such as Sass and Bourbon/Neat), to JavaScript frameworks (AngularJS and Backbone).

Books-A-Million — Birmingham, AL

Digital Designer: Summer 2012 – Present

My responsibilities at BAM's corporate office included designing and coding email campaigns, creating and maintaining websites, developing in-store signage and managing a variety of creative projects from within the marketing department.

Shred Ready — Auburn, AL

Graphic Designer: Spring 2010 – Spring 2011, Fall 2011 – Summer 2012

At Shred Ready, a watersport helmet company, I managed any and all graphic design needs, such as creating seasonal catalogues, magazine ads, tradeshow exhibits, web banners, and helmet graphics, as well as managing all product photography, website content, and technical drawings.
